AHA Video: How the U.S. Supreme Court Vacancy Could Affect Health Care Cases

The AHA this afternoon posted a video with analysis on the impact of the U.S. Supreme Court vacancy and what it means for legal cases that matter to hospitals and health systems. The opening on the court occurred when Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg passed away Friday, Sept. 18.

On this video, AHA General Counsel Melinda Reid Hatton and acclaimed appellate litigator Cate Stetson, a partner at law firm Hogan Lovells, discuss Justice Ginsburg's contribution to the Supreme Court and justice in America, the legal challenges facing the Affordable Care Act, and lawsuits that could affect hospitals and health systems.
